HYDE, Robert Stanley and Helen Ireta Kennah

Bob and Helen Hyde enjoyed life and the people they associated with. Those that knew them also enjoyed their company and friendship. They spent their entire married life of 48½ years in the small mining community of Keetley, the place of Bob's employment. This was where they raised their family and had so many other wonderful friendships and experiences.

Robert Stanley Hyde was born December 29, 1905 in Salt Lake City. He was the fourth of six children born to Frank Henry and Ruby Workman Hyde. He was also a great-grandson of apostle Orson Hyde. Because of his father's employment, as a maintenance mechanic and machinist, Bob spent his youth wherever his father's employment was located. One of those jobs included boilermaker at the Hotel Utah. At this time, young Bob obtained a job as a bellboy, the youngest at the hotel. He was able to meet and serve many distinguished guests including Mae West.

Later Bob was introduced to the mining industry in Keetley where his father was employed. Though Bob had only a limited formal education, he developed skills as a maintenance mechanic for various types of machinery. He was also a self-taught designer and engineer, following a similar trade as his father. Bob obtained employment there, which became his lifelong career. He became the maintenance supervisor at the Keetley mine and helped in the design and building of much of the machinery and mining process that were used for years. Upon his retirement, in 1968, Bob acted as a consultant to the United Park City Mines for a few years. Bob passed away in 1973 after living a full life.

Helen Ireta Kennah was born July 12, 1905 to Bernard Patrick Kennah and Elizabeth Hosler. Helen never knew her father as he died from miners' consumption when she was only 1½ years old. Her mother and three older brothers were very close to Helen and helped her through her young childhood. Those early years were spent in Midway in a home near Memorial Hill of which Helen had many fond memories. Later, the family moved to Heber into a home that is still standing in the Heber 2nd Ward. Helen learned many traits from her mother including being a fine homemaker and cook. She would later utilize those traits improvising for her own family, which she loved to do.

Helen met Bob at a social function in the valley and, and after a short courtship, they were married on December 1, 1925, in Salt Lake City. They were blessed with six children: Betty, Bob, Russell, Barney, Jim, and Charlene all of whom attended and graduated from Wasatch County Schools. They were also blessed with 16 grandchildren.

The Hydys also developed many close friendships in Keetley including Richard and Merle Glazier, Lamar and Isabell Osika, and Ralph and Vera Stringham. Following Bob's death, Helen moved back to Heber where she lived until her passing in 1980.
